Home Rule Bill Becomes Law

The final act in the process of making Alaska into a territory was completed Saturday when the president affixed his signature to the Alaska Home Rule Bill. The attention of Alaskans will now be absorbed by the task of selecting a legislature for the territory. Mayor Emery Valentine, of Juneau, has announced his candidacy for member of assembly from the first district.

Trouble In Chinatown

Trouble has broken out afresh in Wrangell's Chinatown. From a volatile account by Captain Jinks we gather that he was cruelly shot at last Saturday morning about 2 o'clock. Be it Tong, family or religious war, Wm. James Chew is serving a ninety day sentence for the shooting and officials are still delving for the bottom of the trouble.

Two Near Tragedies

Two accidents on the waterfront which but for the fortunate discovery and prompt assistance by citizens would have resulted in the drowning of two boys, occurred on Monday and Tuesday of this week. Monday forenoon Neil Grant, son of J. G. Grant, undertook to sail his father's rowboat with a sack-cloth sail and uncertain rigging. In some way while busy with the boat he fell overboard. When discovered by Dr. Dawes the boat was drifting out with the crew holding to the side but unable to get aboard.

Tuesday afternoon as the City of Seattle was steaming in from the north, Georgie Anderson, aged three, fell off the St. Michael Trading Company's wharf and would have probably drowned had not T. H. Cunningham gone to the rescue by promptly jumping off the dock after him.

Cleaning Paint.

Linseed oil is excellent for cleaning varnished grained paint. It should be applied with a piece of clean soft flannel, rubbed well in and polished with a soft duster, and only the very tiniest drop of oil should be used.

Assessment Showing Increased Valuation

T. J. Case, who is assessing the property this year believes that new property and increased values will bring the total 25 per cent higher than last year showing a remarkable gain.

New Mining Regulations

New mining regulations governing placer claims in Alaska were recently enacted in the House of Representatives and approved on August 1. The location by power of attorney and other matters are changed by the acts which are as follows:

That no association placer-mining claim shall hereafter be located in Alaska in excess of forty acres, and on every placer-mining claim hereafter located in Alaska, and until a patent has been issued therefor, not less than one hundred dollars' worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made during each year, including the year of location, for each and every twenty acres or excess fraction thereof. That no person shall hereafter locate any placer-mining claim in Alaska as attorney for another unless he is duly authorized thereto by a power of attorney in writing, duly acknowledged and recorded in attorney's office in the judicial division where the location is made. Any person so authorized may locate placer-mining claims for not more than two individuals or one association under such power of attorney, but no such agent of attorney shall be authorized or permitted to locate more than two placer-mining claims for any one principal or association during any calendar month, and no placer-mining claim shall hereafter be located in Alaska except under the limitations of this Act. That no person shall locate, cause or procure to be located for himself more than two placer-mining claims in any calendar month! Provided, That one of both of such locations may be included in an association claim. That no placer-mining claim hereafter located in Alaska which shall contain a greater area than is fixed by law, nor which is longer than three times its greatest width. That any placer-mining claim attempted to be located in violation of this Act shall be null and void, and the whole area thereof may be located by any qualified locator as if such prior attempt had been made.

Dan Arrivals

The Uncle Dan arrived from the west coast Wednesday morning with a good list of passengers. From Fish egg: F. Gadd, J. Anderson, Oak Olson, F. H. Tasher; from Howken; E. L. Schrimsher from Tokoan; Mary Loftus, Lena Fletcher, Millie Sylvester, George Sylvester and Roy Churchill.

That's What Noah Did.

"What did Noah live on when the flood had subsided and his provisions in the ark were exhausted?" asked a Sunday school teacher of her class on Sunday.

"I know," squeaked a little girl after all the others had given it up. "Well, what?" inquired the teacher. "Dry land."—London Tit-Bits.

Fusing and Molding Quartz.
A new process of fusing and molding quartz was recently described at a meeting of the French Academy of Sciences, Paris. By this process, which is claimed to be very inexpensive, it is possible to produce not only lenses and other optical materials or implements, but many chemical utensils used for purposes for which platinum has heretofore been the only available material.

Fusing of quartz had already been accomplished by a German manufacturer in making mercury vapor lamps, but the molding of a variety of articles has never been attempted before it is said.

Wife of Canneryman Seriously Ill

Mrs. L. T. Hunt, wife of the principal owner in the Kuiu Island Packing Company, is seriously ill at Port Clarence. The cannery tender Kuiu Queen came in to Wrangell Wednesday for medical aid and returned with Dr. Dawes and Miss Pick.

School Opens Monday

The Wrangell public school will open its doors again next Monday morning. The addition to the building has been completed and furnished to accommodate the larger attendance expected for the coming year.

Mrs. K. M. Burke and Miss K. L. Pritchett have been engaged for the year and will return from their vacation in the states on the Jefferson.

Chance For

A Few Live Alaskans

With the Alaska territorial legislature an assured thing, some sure enough chances are opened up for sixteen live Alaskans to win name and fame in the North land. If the widespread feeling that Congress has given the territory only very limited jurisdiction of its own affairs is true, a successful assemblyman must be of exceptional keenness to get for Alaska all possible benefits that can be derived from the powers Congress has seen fit to relinquish to the territory.

English Place Names.

England can boast that no other country possesses so many Scriptural place names as it does. The name Jericho occurs six times on the ordnance maps. Paradise five times and Nineveh, Mount Zion, Mount Ararat and Mount Ephraim three times each. In Bedfordshire there is a Calvary wood and in Dorsetshire a Jordan hill.

Quick Decision.

Farmer to one of his laborers, who had come home after his first training in the militia: "Which would you rather be, a soldier or a farm hand, Paddy?" Paddy: "A soldier, of course." Farmer: "And why so, Paddy?" Paddy: "Well, you see, you'd be a long time working for a farmer before he'd tell you to stand at ease."—London Tit-Bits.

Verder took up an old bayonet. Damon drew a revolver, but he had no occasion to use it. Verder used the bayonet to raise some brick and mortar on the hearth of the fireplace and took out a package, which he handed to Damon. Damon unrolled it and counted 500 thousand dollar United States bonds.

"I thought we'd make a deal, Mr. Dealby. Good morning. I'm sure you have sense enough to keep him, and I assure you the rest of us have. You see, this cheating the callows is dangerous work when found out."

And, turning, the detective left the shop.

A Study in Wrinkles.

When George Rignold was playing Henry V. in London a friend visited him in his dressing room and remarked a large and handsome photograph of Wordsworth hanging on the wall. Said the friend, "I see you are an admirer of Wordsworth."

"Who's Wordsworth?" queried the actor.

"Why, that's his picture—Wordsworth, the poet."

"Is that old fule a poet? I got him for a study of wrinkles."

Two Fathers and Two Sons.

William—I say, Jack, while in a restaurant the other day I noticed two fathers and two sons at lunch. The charge being 50 cents per head, what do you think the bill totaled out to?

Jack—Well, there is no difficulty in that bill. Why, of course, $2.

William—You are wrong, Jack. The bill amounted to only $1.50.

Jack—How do you make that out?

William—Why, there were only three persons—father, son and grandfather. Three at 50 cents is $1.50.

The Professor's Theory.

"Do girls do as well in college as boys?"

"As well or better."

"Indeed? And how do you account for that?"

"Well, they have more opportunities to study, for one thing. A girl doesn't have to put in a lot of time coloring a moerschau pipe."—Washington Herald.

A Syllogism.

Major Premise—I'm not the head of an ass.

Minor Premise—I'm not the tail of an ass.

Conclusion—I must be no end of an ass. Yale Record.

The Camel.

Following is what Cottontail Gleichen says of a camel: "A camel's hind legs will reach anywhere—over his head, round his chest and on to his hump. Even when lying down an evil disposed animal will shoot out his hind legs and bring you to a sitting posture. His neck is of the same pliancy. He will chew the root of his tail, nip you in the ear or lay the top of his head on his hump. He also bellows and roars at you whatever you are doing—saddling him, feeding him, mounting him, unmounting him. To the uninitiated a camel going for one with his mouth open and gurgling horribly is a terrible sight, but do not mind him; it is only his way. I heard of one or two men having been kicked at various times, but it is the exception not the rule, for the camel is really a very docile animal and learns to behave himself in the most trying position with equanimity, though I fear it is only the result of want of brains."

THE VENDER OF CURIOSITIES

Why Mr. Dealy Paid a Huge Sum For a Manuscript.

"Good morning, Mr. Verder? How is the curio business today?"

"Fairly good. Can I do anything for you?"

"Since you deal in old manuscripts, I have thought I might sell you one."

"Um! The prices we get for manuscripts are so poor that it hardly pays us to buy them, even when we get them at our own terms. But to whom am I indebted for this visit? I don't know that I ever saw you before."

"Call me Damon. I don't care to be known just now; especially in this transaction. If the police should get hold of the matter they might make trouble for me."

"If I could find a certain man," continued Damon, "I could sell it to him for every cent he has in the world."

Verder said nothing for a time. He appeared to be puzzled by the singular statement. Damon was watching him closely. "Why do you come here?" said Verder at last.

"I have thought you might find the man for me."

There was another pause, at the end of which Verder said:

"I could tell better about that if I knew his name."

"It is Dealy."

Verder turned from the piercing glance the other brought to bear upon him, went to a desk and began to look over his cashbook.

"You don't seem to know him."

"No, I don't. You must excuse me."

"Would you not like to see the bit of paper I refer to?" asked Damon.

"It would not interest me."

"Not even to know where it was found?"

The curio merchant seemed not to hear the question. Damon proceeded:

"I had a visit the other day from a dealer in secondhand furniture. He told me that he had bought a desk that had belonged to an old man who was found one morning some years ago dead in his bed. Had it not been for some blue marks on his throat—there were three right hand finger marks, the third finger missing—his death would have been attributed to heart disease. As it was it was believed that he was murdered. When his estate was settled, instead of finding substantial in government bonds which the deceased had informed his family he had put away for a certain use, none was found. Well, as I see that I am boring you I will condense what I have to say. The furniture dealer who bought the desk was putting it in order when he came upon a secret drawer in which was a letter. That's the letter I came here to sell."

Meanwhile the curio dealer had ceased to add figures and was listening breathlessly. When the speaker had finished he turned his face to a fire place fitted with a colonial mantel, brass andirons and fender. He placed his hands on the mantel, bowed his head and groaned. The third finger on his right hand was missing.

Presently he turned.

"What do you want for your—your curio?" he asked.

"You wouldn't buy it without seeing it, would you?"

"If? I wouldn't buy it, but I know a man who—"

"Just so. I thought you would know somebody who would take an interest in the matter. But I think it would sharpen your faculties to see the letter or at least hear it read. I will read it to you." And, taking a paper from his pocket, he read aloud:

"I must have the rest of the bonds before the close of the month. If not you will not live to complete the year." DEALY.

"The name is made up," continued Damon, looking up at his victim. "That's plain. It's the word 'dead'—a pretty villainous deal, I should say. However, for that matter, the deal I'm after may not be very reputable. How much would your friend pay for the letter?"

"Name the price," said Verder.

"The missing bonds."

"If you will come in tomorrow I will tell you what I have done."

"I must know today."

"Well, remain here. I will be back within half an hour."

"If you need to send a messenger, call me, but I'm a timid man and wouldn't like to be left so long alone."

"What guarantee has this—Dealy—that he will not be prosecuted?"

"Ah! Now we are getting to something that interests you. Look at this."

He drew from his pocket a paper which he handed to Verder. Verder read it and put it in his own pocket. It was an indemnification.

"Now you're acting like a sensible man. But I want to explain to you that the estate of the man who was bled of his bonds turned out a shell, and his family are impoverished. That's why Mr. Dealy escapes the gallows. See?"

The Ducking Stool in England.
The latest recorded use of the ducking stool in England—the designation cucking and ducking were, of course, synonymous in the days of Queen Elizabeth was in 1806. It was at Leominster when a woman named Jenny Pipes, alias Jane Corran, was paraded through the town on the ducking stool and ducked in the water near Kenwaster bridge by order of the magistrates. In 1817 another woman, called Sarah Leake, was wheeled round the place in the same chair, but not ducked, as, fortunately for her, the water was too low. The instrument of punishment in question has not been used since then.—London Notes and Queries.

BECOME YOUNG AGAIN.
We are too busy, too encumbered, too much occupied, too active. We read too much. The one thing needful is to throw off all one's load of cares and to become again young, living happily and gracefully in the present hour. We must know how to put occupation aside, which does not mean, however, that we must be idle.—Mrs. Humphry Ward.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Sewing Table Made From an Ordinary Cheese Box.

Here is a homemade work table which is a great convenience. It is made with an ordinary cheesebox and three sticks for legs. The sticks may be flat, one inch wide, half an inch thick and twenty-six inches long or flat on one side and rounded. The sticks are nailed to the large part of the box so that the upper edge of box is fourteen inches from the floor. The cover is decorated and nailed even with the top of the sticks; paint or stain it any desired color. Like both parts with ergoforms or anything one wishes, around the inner edge of upper part fasten little cushions for needles and pins, also a pocket for thimble, Thread, darning, cotton, buttons, hooks and eyes, scissors, etc., are kept in upper part. In the lower part is space for rolls of material for mending and also for the garments to be mended. It is light and easily carried to any part of the house and everything needed to work with is there.—Orange Judd Farmer.

A CHEERFUL FACE.

It is said there is nothing which diffuses itself more quickly in a family than the coolness, indifference and discontent which manifest themselves in the countenances of one of its members. This thought is not absolutely true. There are some things which communicate themselves with as much rapidity and more force. They are a bright smile, a frank and open manner, a cheerful face, a happy heart. There is enough misery in the world without adding to it a single frown. A cheerful face is always welcome.

WHY?
Blend Flour

Fisher's Blend Flour

STRAIGHT Eastern Hard Wheat flour has its uses

So has straight soft wheat flour. But to get results from the hard wheat flour, it must be thoroughly bleached. The housewife finds this too tedious. Furthermore, we're living in a lightening age. Yes, Eastern Hard Wheat flour has desirable qualities that cannot be overlooked in the production of the best breadstuff. Bakers realize this, for invariably they combine flour themselves, made of Eastern Hard Wheat and Western Soft Wheat—that is to say, Bleach Them.

But the two must not be mixed haphazardly, as the superfluous of one often detracts wholly on a proper balance. Before offering the public their product, the Fisher's Finest Mills Company made extensive tests to determine the exact proportion of each flour required to produce the blend of highest efficiency.

The formula finally adopted, in actual baking competition with all other well-known brands on the market today, has repeatedly demonstrated its excellence. You get the scientific combination in buying
